

HISTORIC DOUBTS RELATIVE TO NAPOLEON BUONAPARTE

R. Whately

STORAGE-ITEM
MAIN - LPC

LP9-F21A
U.B.C. LIBRARY

DC
203.9
W56
1852

J. B. C. LIBRARIES

THE UNIVERSITY OF
BRITISH COLUMBIA

H. Sinclair Collection

*Presented by
H. R. MacMillan
1965*

HISTORIC
D O U B T S

H. Gray. 1852.

RELATIVE TO

NAPOLEON BUONAPARTE.

Is not the same reason available in theology and in politics?
Will you follow truth but to a certain point?—BURKE'S Vindication of Natural Society.

The first author who stated fairly the connexion between the evidence of testimony and the evidence of experience, was Hume, in his ESSAY ON MIRACLES; a work abounding in maxims of great use in the conduct of life.—Edinburgh Review, Sept. 1814, p. 328.

THE TENTH EDITION.

LONDON:
JOHN W. PARKER AND SON, WEST STRAND.
MDCCCLII.

LONDON:
SAVILL AND EDWARDS, PRINTERS, CHANDOS STREET,
COVENT GARDEN.

PREFACE.

SEVERAL of the readers of this little work have derived much amusement from the mistakes of others respecting its nature and object. It has been by some represented as a serious attempt to inculcate universal scepticism; while others have considered it as a jeu d'esprit, &c. The Author does not, however, design to entertain his readers with accounts of the mistakes which have arisen respecting it; because many of them, he is convinced, would be received with incredulity; and he could not, without an indelicate exposure of individuals, verify his anecdotes.

But some sensible readers have complained of the difficulty of determining what they are to believe. Of the existence of Buonaparte, indeed, they remained fully convinced; nor, if it were left doubtful, would any important results ensue; but if they can give no satisfactory reason for their conviction, how can they know, it is asked, that they may not be mistaken as to other points of greater consequence, on which they are no less fully convinced, but on which all men are not agreed? The Author has accordingly been solicited to endeavour to frame some canons which may furnish a standard for determining what evidence is to be received.

This he conceives to be impracticable, except to that extent to which it is accomplished by a sound system of Logic; including under that title, a portion—that which relates to the “Laws of Evidence”—of what is sometimes treated of under the head of “Rhetoric.” But the full and complete accomplishment of such an object would confer on man the unattainable attribute of infallibility.

But the difficulty complained of, he conceives to arise, in many instances, from men’s misstating the grounds of their own conviction. They are convinced, indeed, and perhaps with very sufficient reason; but they imagine this reason to be a different one from what it is. The evidence to which they have assented is applied to their minds in a different manner from that in which they believe it is—and suppose it ought to be—applied. And when challenged to defend and justify their own belief, they feel at a loss, because they are attempting to maintain a position which is not in fact that in which their force lies.

For a development of the nature, the consequences, and the remedies of this mistake, the reader is referred to “Hinds on Inspiration,” pp. 30—46. If such a development is to be found in any earlier works, the Author of the following pages at least has never chanced to meet with any attempt of the kind.*

* See Elements of Rhetoric, p. i. ch. 2, § 4.

It has been objected, again, by some persons of no great logical accuracy of thought, that as there would not be any moral blame imputable to one who should seriously disbelieve, or doubt, the existence of Buonaparte, so neither is a rejection of the Scripture-histories to be considered as implying anything morally culpable.

The same objection, such as it is, would apply equally to many of the Parables of the New Testament. It might be said, for instance, that as a woman who should decline taking the trouble of searching for her lost "piece of silver," or a merchant who should neglect making an advantageous purchase of a "goodly pearl," would be guilty of no moral wrong, it must follow that there is nothing morally wrong in neglecting to reclaim a lost sinner, or in rejecting the Gospel, &c.

But any man of common sense readily perceives that the force of these parables consists in the circumstance that men do not usually show this carelessness about temporal goods; and, therefore, are guilty of gross and culpable inconsistency, if they are comparatively careless about what is far more important.

So, also, in the present case. If any man's mind were so constituted as to reject the same evidence in all matters alike—if, for instance, he really doubted or disbelieved the existence of Buonaparte, and considered the Egyptian pyramids as fabulous, because, forsooth, he had no "experience" of the erection of such huge structures, and had experience of travellers telling huge lies—he would be regarded, perhaps, as very silly, or as insane, but not as morally culpable. But if (as is intimated in the concluding sentence of this work) a man is influenced in one case by objections which, in another case, he would deride, then he stands convicted of being unfairly biassed by his prejudices.

It is only necessary to add, that as this work first appeared in the year 1819, many things are spoken of in the present tense, to which the past would now be applicable.

A Postscript was added to the third edition, which was published soon after the accounts of Buonaparte's death reached us; and another at the time of the supposed removal of his remains. A third, in reference to more recent occurrences, was added to the ninth edition.

HISTORIC DOUBTS

RELATIVE TO

NAPOLEON BUONAPARTE.

LONG as the public attention has been occupied by the extraordinary personage from whose ambition we are supposed to have so narrowly escaped, the subject seems to have lost scarcely anything of its interest. We are still occupied in recounting the exploits, discussing the character, inquiring into the present situation, and even conjecturing as to the future prospects of Napoleon Buonaparte.

Nor is this at all to be wondered at, if we consider the very extraordinary nature of those exploits, and of that character; their greatness and extensive importance, as well as the unexampled strangeness of the events, and also that strong additional stimulant, the mysterious uncertainty that hangs over the character of the man. If it be doubtful whether any history (exclusive of such as is confessedly fabulous) ever attributed to its hero such a series of wonderful achievements compressed into so small a space of time, it is certain that to no one were ever assigned so many dissimilar characters.

It is true, indeed, that party prejudices have drawn a favourable and an unfavourable portrait of almost every eminent man; but amidst all the diversities of colouring, something of the same general outline is always distinguishable. And even the virtues in the one description bear some resemblance to the vices of another: rashness, for instance, will be called courage, or courage, rashness; heroic firmness, and obstinate pride, will correspond in the two opposite descriptions; and in some leading features both will agree. Neither the friends nor the enemies of Philip of Macedon, or of Julius Cæsar, ever questioned their COURAGE, or their MILITARY SKILL.

With Buonaparte, however, it has been otherwise. This obscure Corsican adventurer, a man, according to some, of extraordinary talents and courage, according to others, of very moderate abilities, and a rank coward, advanced rapidly in the French army, obtained a high command, gained a series of important victories, and, elated by success, embarked in an expedition against Egypt; which was planned and conducted, according to some, with the most consummate skill, according to others, with the utmost wildness and folly: he was unsuccessful, however; and leaving the army of Egypt in a very distressed situation, he returned to France, and found the nation, or at least the army, so favourably disposed towards him, that he was enabled, with the utmost ease, to overthrow the existing government, and obtain for himself the supreme power; at first under the modest appellation of Consul, but afterwards with the more sounding title of Emperor. While in possession of this power, he overthrew the most powerful coalitions of the other European States against him; and though driven from the sea by the British fleets, overran nearly the whole continent, triumphant; finishing a war, not unfrequently, in a single campaign, he entered the capitals of most of the hostile potentates, deposed and created Kings at his pleasure, and appeared the virtual sovereign of the chief part of the continent, from the frontiers of Spain to those of Russia. Even those countries we find him invading with prodigious armies, defeating their forces, penetrating to their capitals, and threatening their total subjugation. But at Moscow his progress is stopped: a winter of unusual severity, co-operating with the efforts of the Russians, totally destroys his enormous host: and the German sovereigns throw off the yoke, and combine to oppose him. He raises another vast army, which is also ruined at Leipsic; and again another, with which, like a second Antæus, he for some time maintains himself in France; but is finally defeated, deposed, and banished to the island of Elba, of which the sovereignty is conferred on him. Thence he returns, in about nine months, at the head of 600 men, to attempt the deposition of King Louis, who had been peaceably recalled; the French nation declare in his favour, and he is reinstated without a struggle. He raises another great army to oppose the allied powers, which is totally defeated at Waterloo; he is a second time deposed, surrenders to the British, and is placed in confinement at the island of St. Helena. Such is the outline of the eventful history presented to us; in the detail of which, however, there is almost every conceivable variety of statement; while the motives and conduct of the chief actor are involved in still greater doubt, and the subject of still more eager controversy.

In the midst of these controversies, the preliminary question, concerning the existence of this extraordinary personage, seems never to have occurred to any one as a matter of doubt; and to show even the smallest hesitation in admitting it, would probably be regarded as an excess of scepticism.

ticism; on the ground that this point has always been taken for granted by the disputants on all sides, being indeed implied by the very nature of their disputes.

But is it in fact found that undisputed points are always such as have been the most carefully examined as to the evidence on which they rest? that facts or principles which are taken for granted, without controversy, as the common basis of opposite opinions, are always themselves established on sufficient grounds? On the contrary, is not any such fundamental point, from the very circumstance of its being taken for granted at once, and the attention drawn off to some other question, likely to be admitted on insufficient evidence, and the flaws in that evidence overlooked? Experience will teach us that such instances often occur: witness, the well-known anecdote of the Royal Society; to whom King Charles II. proposed as a question, whence it is that a vessel of water receives no addition of weight from a live fish being put into it, though it does, if the fish be dead. Various solutions, of great ingenuity, were proposed, discussed, objected to, and defended; nor was it till they had been long bewildered in the inquiry, that it occurred to them to try the experiment; by which they at once ascertained, that the phænomenon which they were striving to account for,—which was the acknowledged basis and substratum, as it were, of their debates,—had no existence but in the invention of the witty monarch.*

Another instance of the same kind is so very remarkable that I cannot forbear mentioning it. It was objected to the system of Copernicus when first brought forward, that if the earth turned on its axis as he represented, a stone dropped from the summit of a tower would not fall at the foot of it, but at a great distance to the west; in the same manner as a stone dropped from the mast-head of a ship in full sail, does not fall at the foot of the mast, but towards the stern. To this it was answered, that a stone being a part of the earth obeys the same laws, and moves with it; whereas, it is no part of the ship; of which, consequently, its motion is independent. This solution was admitted by some, but opposed by others; and the controversy went on with spirit; nor was it till one hundred years after the death of Copernicus, that the experiment being tried, it was ascertained that the stone thus dropped from the head of the mast does fall at the foot of it!*

* “A report is spread, (says Voltaire in one of his works,) “that there is, in some country or other, a giant as big as a “mountain; and men presently fall to hot disputing concerning the precise length of his nose, the breadth of his thumb, “and other particulars, and anathematize each other for heterodoxy of belief concerning them. In the midst of all, if “some bold sceptic ventures to hint a doubt as to the existence of this giant, all are ready to join against him, and “tear him to pieces.” This looks almost like a prophetic allegory relating to the gigantic Napoleon.

Let it be observed that I am not now impugning any one particular narrative; but merely showing generally, that what is unquestioned is not necessarily unquestionable; since men will often, at the very moment when they are accurately sifting the evidence of some disputed point, admit hastily, and on the most insufficient grounds, what they have been accustomed to see taken for granted.

The celebrated Hume† has pointed out, also, the readiness with which men believe, on very slight evidence, any story that pleases their imagination by its admirable and marvellous character. Such

* Οὕτως ἀταλαίπωρος τοῖς πολλοῖς ἡ ζήτησις τῆς ἀληθείας, καὶ ἐπὶ τὰ ἔτοιμα μᾶλλον τρέπονται. Thucyd. b. i. c. 20.

† “ With what greediness are the miraculous accounts of “ travellers received, their descriptions of sea and land monsters, their relations of wonderful adventures, strange men, “ and uncouth manners !”—HUME’S Essay on Miracles, p. 179, 12mo ; p. 185, 8vo, 1767 ; p. 117, 8vo, 1817.

N.B.—In order to give every possible facility of reference, three editions of Hume’s Essays have been generally employed ; a 12mo, London, 1756, and two 8vo editions.

hasty credulity, however, as he well remarks, is utterly unworthy of a philosophical mind; which should rather suspend its judgment the more, in proportion to the strangeness of the account, and yield to none but the most decisive and unimpeachable proofs.

Let it, then, be allowed us, as is surely reasonable, just to inquire with respect to the extraordinary story I have been speaking of, on what evidence we believe it. We shall be told that it is notorious; i. e., in plain English, it is very much talked about. But as the generality of those who talk about Buonaparte do not even pretend to speak from their own authority, but merely to repeat what they have casually heard, we cannot reckon them as in any degree witnesses; but must allow ninety-nine hundredths of what we are told to be mere hearsay, which would not be at all the more worthy of credit even if it were repeated by ten times as many more. As for those who profess to have personally known Napoleon Buonaparte, and to have themselves witnessed his transactions, I write not for them: if any such there be, who are inwardly conscious of the truth of all they relate, I have nothing to say to them, but to beg that they will be tolerant and charitable towards their neighbours, who have not the same means of ascertaining the truth, and who may well be excused for remaining doubtful about such extraordinary events, till most unanswerable proofs shall be adduced. "I would not have believed such a thing, if I had not seen it," is a common preface or appendix to a narrative of marvels; and usually calls forth from an intelligent hearer the appropriate answer, "No more will I."

Let us, however, endeavour to trace up some of this hearsay evidence as far towards its source as we are able. Most persons would refer to the newspapers as the authority from which their knowledge on the subject was derived; so that, generally speaking, we may say it is on the testimony of the newspapers that men believe in the existence and exploits of Napoleon Buonaparte.

It is rather a remarkable circumstance, that it is common to hear Englishmen speak of the impudent fabrications of foreign newspapers, and express wonder that any one can be found to credit them; while they conceive that, in this favoured land, the liberty of the press is a sufficient security for veracity. It is true they often speak contemptuously of such "newspaper stories" as last but a short time; indeed they continually see them contradicted within a day or two in the same paper, or their falsity detected by some journal of an opposite party; but still whatever is long adhered to and often repeated, especially if it also appear in several different papers (and this, though they notoriously copy from one another), is almost sure to be generally believed. Whence this high respect which is practically paid to newspaper authority? Do men think, that because a witness has been perpetually detected in falsehood, he may therefore be the more safely believed whenever he is not detected? or does adherence to a story, and frequent repetition of it, render it the more credible? On the contrary, is it not a common remark in other cases, that a liar will generally stand to and reiterate what he has once said, merely because he has said it?

Let us, if possible, divest ourselves of this superstitious veneration for everything that appears "in print," and examine a little more systematically the evidence which is adduced.

I suppose it will not be denied, that the three following are among the most important points to be ascertained, in deciding on the credibility of witnesses; first, whether they have the means of gaining correct information; secondly, whether they have any interest in concealing truth, or propagating falsehood; and, thirdly, whether they agree in their testimony. Let us examine the present witnesses upon all these points.

First, what means have the editors of newspapers for gaining correct information? We know not, except from their own statements. Besides what is copied from other journals, foreign or British, (which is usually more than three-fourths of the news published,)* they profess to refer to the authority of certain "private correspondents" abroad; who these correspondents are, what means they have of obtaining information, or whether they exist at all, we have no way of ascertaining. We find ourselves in the condition of the Hindoos, who are told by their priests that the earth stands

* "Suppose a fact to be transmitted through twenty persons; the first communicating it to the second, the second to the third, &c., and let the probability of each testimony be expressed by nine-tenths, (that is, suppose that of ten reports made by each witness, nine only are true,) then, at every time the story passes from one witness to another, the evidence is reduced to nine-tenths of what it was before. Thus, after it has passed through the whole twenty, the evidence will be found to be less than one-eighth."— LA PLACE, Essai Philosophique sur les Probabilités.

That is, the chances for the fact thus attested being true, will be, according to this distinguished calculator, less than one in eight. Very few of the common newspaper-stories, however, relating to foreign countries, could be traced, if the matter were carefully investigated, up to an actual eye-witness, even through twenty intermediate witnesses; and many of the steps of our ladder, would, I fear, prove but rotten; few of the reporters would deserve to have one in ten fixed as the proportion of their false accounts.

on an elephant, and the elephant on a tortoise; but are left to find out for themselves what the tortoise stands on, or whether it stands on anything at all.

So much for our clear knowledge of the means of information possessed by these witnesses; next for the grounds on which we are to calculate on their veracity.

Have they not a manifest interest in circulating the wonderful accounts of Napoleon Buonaparte and his achievements, whether true or false? Few would read newspapers if they did not sometimes find wonderful or important news in them; and we may safely say that no subject was ever found so inexhaustibly interesting as the present.

It may be urged, however, that there are several adverse political parties, of which the various public prints are respectively the organs, and who would not fail to expose each other's fabrications.* Doubtless they would, if they could do so without at the same time exposing their own; but identity of

* "I did not mention the difficulty of detecting a falsehood in any private or even public history, at the time and place where it is said to happen; much more where the scene is removed to ever so small a distance. . . . But the matter never comes to any issue, if trusted to the common method of altercation and debate and flying rumours."—HUME's Essay on Miracles, p. 195, 12mo; pp. 200, 201, 8vo, 1767; p. 127, 8vo, 1817.

interests may induce a community of operations up to a certain point. And let it be observed that the object of contention between these rival parties is, who shall have the administration of public affairs, the control of public expenditure, and the disposal of places: the question, I say, is, not, whether the people shall be governed or not, but, by which party they shall be governed; — not whether the taxes shall be paid or not, but who shall receive them. Now it must be admitted, that Buonaparte is a political bugbear, most convenient to any administration: “if you do not adopt our measures and “reject those of our opponents, Buonaparte will be “sure to prevail over you; if you do not submit “to the Government, at least under our administration, this formidable enemy will take advantage of your insubordination, to conquer and “enslave you: pay your taxes cheerfully, or the “tremendous Buonaparte will take all from you.” Buonaparte, in short, was the burden of every song; his redoubted name was the charm which always succeeded in unloosing the purse-strings of the nation. And let us not be too sure,* safe as we now think ourselves, that some occasion may not occur for again producing on the stage so useful a personage: it is not merely to naughty children in the nursery that the threat of being "given to Buonaparte" has proved effectual.

* See the third Postscript appended to this edition.

It is surely probable, therefore, that, with an object substantially the same, all parties may have availed themselves of one common instrument. It is not necessary to suppose that for this purpose they secretly entered into a formal agreement; though, by the way, there are reports afloat, that the editors of the Courier and Morning Chronicle hold amicable consultations as to the conduct of their public warfare: I will not take upon me to say that this is incredible; but at any rate it is not necessary for the establishment of the probability I contend for. Neither again would I imply that all newspaper editors are utterers of forged stories, "knowing them to be forged;" most likely the great majority of them publish what they find in other papers with the same simplicity that their readers peruse it; and therefore, it must be observed, are not at all more proper than their readers to be cited as authorities.

Still it will be said, that unless we suppose a regularly preconcerted plan, we must at least expect to find great discrepancies in the accounts published. Though they might adopt the general outline of facts one from another, they would have to fill up the detail for themselves; and in this, therefore, we should meet with infinite and irreconcilable variety.

Now this is precisely the point I am tending to; for the fact exactly accords with the above supposition; the discordance and mutual contradictions of these witnesses being such as would alone throw a considerable shade of doubt over their testimony. It is not in minute circumstances alone that the discrepancy appears, such as might be expected to appear in a narrative substantially true; but in very great and leading transactions, and such as are very intimately connected with the supposed hero. For instance, it is by no means agreed whether Buonaparte led in person the celebrated charge over the bridge of Lodi, (for celebrated it certainly is, as well as the siege of Troy, whether either event ever really took place or no,) or was safe in the rear, while Augereau performed the exploit. The same doubt hangs over the charge of the French cavalry at Waterloo. The peasant Lacoste, who professed to have been Buonaparte's guide on the day of battle, and who earned a fortune by detailing over and over again to visitors all the particulars of what the great man said and did up to the moment of flight,—this same Lacoste has been suspected by others, besides me, of having never even been near the great man, and having fabricated the whole story for the sake of making a gain of the credulity of travellers. In the accounts that are extant of the battle itself, published by persons professing to have been present, the reader will find that there is a discrepancy of three or four hours as to the time when the battle began!—a battle, be it remembered, not fought with javelins and arrows, like those of the ancients, in which one part of a large army might be engaged, while a distant portion of the same army knew nothing of it; but a battle commencing (if indeed it were ever fought at all) with the firing of cannon, which would have announced pretty loudly what was going on.

It is no less uncertain whether or no this strange personage poisoned in Egypt an hospital-full of his own soldiers, and butchered in cold blood a garrison that had surrendered. But not to multiply instances; the battle of Borodino, which is represented as one of the greatest ever fought, was unequivocally claimed as a victory by both parties; nor is the question decided at this day. We have official accounts on both sides, circumstantially detailed, in the names of supposed respectable persons, professing to have been present on the spot; yet totally irreconcilable. Both these accounts may be false; but since one of them must be false, that one (it is no matter which we suppose) proves incontrovertibly this important maxim; that it is possible for a narrative—however circumstantial—however steadily maintained—however public, and however important, the events it relates—how- ever grave the authority on which it is published—to be nevertheless an entire fabrication !

Many of the events which have been recorded were probably believed much the more readily and firmly, from the apparent caution and hesitation with which they were at first published,—the vehement contradiction in our papers of many pretended French accounts,—and the abuse lavished upon them for falsehood, exaggeration, and gasconade. But is it not possible,—is it not indeed perfectly natural,—that the publishers even of known falsehood should assume this cautious demeanour, and this abhorrence of exaggeration, in order the more easily to gain credit? Is it not also very possible, that those who actually believed what they published, may have suspected mere exaggeration in stories which were entire fictions? Many men have that sort of simplicity, that they think themselves quite secure against being deceived, provided they believe only part of the story they hear; when perhaps the whole is equally false. So that perhaps these simple-hearted editors, who were so vehement against lying bulletins, and so wary in announcing their great news, were in the condition of a clown, who thinks he has bought a great bargain of a Jew because he has beat down the price perhaps from a guinea to a crown, for some article that is not really worth a groat.

With respect to the character of Buonaparte, the dissonance is, if possible, still greater. According to some, he was a wise, humane, magnanimous hero; others paint him as a monster of cruelty, meanness, and perfidy: some, even of those who are most inveterate against him, speak very highly of his political and military ability; others place him on the very verge of insanity. But allowing that all this may be the colouring of party-prejudice, (which surely is allowing a great deal,) there is one point to which such a solution will hardly apply: if there be anything that can be clearly ascertained in history, one would think it must be the personal courage of a military man; yet here we are as much at a loss as ever; at the very same times, and on the same occasions, he is described by different writers as a man of undaunted intrepidity, and as an absolute poltroon.

What, then, are we to believe? If we are disposed to credit all that is told us, we must believe in the existence not only of one, but of two or three Buonapartes; if we admit nothing but what is well-authenticated, we shall be compelled to doubt of the existence of any.*

* We entertain a suspicion concerning any matter of fact, "when the witnesses contradict each other; when they are "of a suspicious character; when they have an interest in "what they affirm."—HUME'S Essay on Miracles, p. 172, 12mo; p. 176, 8vo, 1767; p. 113, 8vo, 1817.

It appears, then, that those on whose testimony the existence and actions of Buonaparte are generally believed, fail in ALL the most essential points on which the credibility of witnesses depends: first, we have no assurance that they have access to correct information; secondly, they have an apparent interest in propagating falsehood; and, thirdly, they palpably contradict each other in the most important points.

Another circumstance which throws additional suspicion on these tales is, that the whig-party, as they are called,—the warm advocates of liberty, and opposers of the encroachments of monarchical power,—have for some time past strenuously espoused the cause, and vindicated the character of Buonaparte, who is represented by all as having been, if not a tyrant, at least an absolute despot. One of the most forward in this cause is a gentleman, who once stood foremost in holding up this very man to public execration,—who first published, and long maintained against popular incredulity, the accounts of his atrocities in Egypt. Now that such a course should be adopted for party-purposes, by those who are aware that the whole story is a fiction, and the hero of it imaginary, seems not very incredible; but if they believed in the real existence of this despot, I cannot conceive how they could so forsake their principles as to advocate his cause, and eulogize his character.

After all, it may be expected that many who perceive the force of these objections, will yet be loath to think it possible that they and the public at large can have been so long and so greatly imposed upon. And thus it is that the magnitude and boldness of a fraud becomes its best support; the millions who for so many ages have believed in Mahomet or Brahma, lean as it were on each other for support; and not having vigour of mind enough boldly to throw off vulgar prejudices, and dare be wiser than the multitude, persuade themselves that what so many have acknowledged must be true. But I call on those who boast their philosophical freedom of thought, and would fain tread in the steps of Hume and other inquirers of the like exalted and speculative genius, to follow up fairly and fully their own principles, and, throwing off the shackles of authority, to examine carefully the evidence of whatever is proposed to them, before they admit its truth.

That even in this enlightened age, as it is called, a whole nation may be egregiously imposed upon, even in matters which intimately concern them, may be proved (if it has not been already proved) by the following instance: it was stated in the newspapers, that, a month after the battle of Trafalgar, an English officer, who had been a prisoner of war, and was exchanged, returned to this country from France, and beginning to condole with his countrymen on the terrible defeat they had sustained, was infinitely astonished to learn that the battle of Trafalgar was a splendid victory: he had been assured, he said, that in that battle the English had been totally defeated; and the French were fully and universally persuaded that such was the fact. Now if this report of the belief of the French nation was not true, the British public were completely imposed upon; if it were true, then both nations were, at the same time, rejoicing in the event of the same battle, as a signal victory to themselves; and consequently one or other, at least, of these nations must have been the dupes of their government: for if the battle was never fought at all, or was not decisive on either side, in that case both parties were deceived. This instance, I conceive, is absolutely demonstrative of the point in question.

“But what shall we say to the testimony of “those many respectable persons who went to “Plymouth on purpose, and saw Buonaparte with “their own eyes? must they not trust their “senses?” I would not disparage either the eyesight or the veracity of these gentlemen. I am ready to allow that they went to Plymouth for the purpose of seeing Buonaparte; nay, more, that they actually rowed out into the harbour in a boat, and came alongside of a man-of-war, on whose deck they saw a man in a cocked hat, who, they were told, was Buonaparte. This is the utmost point to which their testimony goes; how they ascertained that this man in the cocked hat had gone through all the marvellous and romantic adventures with which we have so long been amused, we are not told. Did they perceive in his physiognomy, his true name, and authentic history? Truly this evidence is such as country people give one for a story of apparitions; if you discover any signs of incredulity, they triumphantly show the very house which the ghost haunted, the identical dark corner where it used to vanish, and perhaps even the tombstone of the person whose death it foretold. Jack Cade's nobility was supported by the same irresistible kind of evidence: having asserted that the eldest son of Edmund Mortimer, Earl of March, was stolen by a beggar-woman, "became a brick-layer when he came to age," and was the father of the supposed Jack Cade; one of his companions confirms the story, by saying, "Sir, he made a chimney in my father's house, and the bricks are alive at this day to testify it; therefore, deny it not."

Much of the same kind is the testimony of our brave countrymen, who are ready to produce the scars they received in fighting against this terrible Buonaparte. That they fought and were wounded, they may safely testify; and probably they no less firmly believe what they were told respecting the cause in which they fought: it would have been a high breach of discipline to doubt it; and they, I conceive, are men better skilled in handling a musket, than in sifting evidence, and detecting imposture. But I defy any one of them to come forward and declare, on his own knowledge, what was the cause in which he fought,—under whose commands the opposed generals acted,—and whether the person who issued those commands did really perform the mighty achievements we are told of.

Let those, then, who pretend to philosophical freedom of inquiry,—who scorn to rest their opinions on popular belief, and to shelter themselves under the example of the unthinking multitude, consider carefully, each one for himself, what is the evidence proposed to himself in particular, for the existence of such a person as Napoleon Buonaparte:—I do not mean, whether there ever was a person bearing that name, for that is a question of no consequence; but whether any such person ever performed all the wonderful things attributed to him;—let him then weigh well the objections to that evidence, (of which I have given but a hasty and imperfect sketch,) and if he then finds it amount to anything more than a probability, I have only to congratulate him on his easy faith.

But the same testimony which would have great weight in establishing a thing intrinsically probable, will lose part of this weight in proportion as the matter attested is improbable; and if adduced in support of anything that is at variance with uniform experience,* will be rejected at once by all sound reasoners. Let us then consider what sort of a story it is that is proposed to our acceptance. How grossly contradictory are the reports of the different authorities, I have already remarked: but consider, by itself, the story told by any one of them; it carries an air of fiction and romance on the very face of it. All the events are great, and splendid, and marvellous;† great armies,—great victories,—great frosts,—great reverses, — “hair-breadth ’scapes,” — empires sub-

* “That testimony itself derives all its force from experience, seems very certain.
 “ . . . The first author, we believe, who stated fairly the “connexion between the evidence of testimony and the evidence of experience, was HUME, in his Essay on Miracles, “a work. . . abounding in maxims of great use in the conduct of life.”—Edin. Review, Sept. 1814, p. 328.

† “Suppose, for instance, that the fact which the testimony endeavours to establish partakes of the extraordinary verted in a few days; everything happened in defiance of political calculations, and in opposition to the experience of past times; everything upon that grand scale, so common in Epic Poetry, so rare in real life; and thus calculated to strike the imagination of the vulgar, and to remind the sober-thinking few of the Arabian Nights. Every event, too, has that roundness and completeness which is so characteristic of fiction; nothing is done by halves; we have complete victories,—total overthrows,—entire subversion of empires,—perfect re-establishments of them,—crowded upon us in rapid succession. To enumerate the improbabilities of each of the several parts of this history, would fill volumes; but they are so fresh in every one's memory, that there is no need of such a detail: let any judicious man, not ignorant of history and of human nature, revolve them in his mind, and consider how far they are conformable to Experience,* our best and only sure guide. In vain will

“and the marvellous; in that case, the evidence resulting from the testimony receives a diminution, greater or less in proportion as the fact is more or less unusual.”—HUME's Essay on Miracles, p. 173, 12mo; p. 176, 8vo, 1767; p. 113, 8vo, 1817.

* “The ultimate standard by which we determine all disputes that may arise is always derived from experience and observation.”—HUME's Essay on Miracles, p. 172, 12mo; p. 175, 8vo, 1767; p. 112, 8vo, 1817.

he seek in history for something similar to this wonderful Buonaparte; "nought but himself can be his parallel."

Will the conquests of Alexander be compared with his? They were effected over a rabble of effeminate, undisciplined barbarians; else his progress would hardly have been so rapid: witness his father Philip, who was much longer occupied in subduing the comparatively insignificant territory of the warlike and civilized Greeks, notwithstanding their being divided into numerous petty States, whose mutual jealousy enabled him to contend with them separately. But the Greeks had never made such progress in arts and arms as the great and powerful States of Europe, which Buonaparte is represented as so speedily overpowering. His empire has been compared to the Roman: mark the contrast; he gains in a few years, that dominion, or at least control, over Germany, wealthy, civilized, and powerful, which the Romans in the plenitude of their power, could not obtain, during a struggle of as many centuries, against the ignorant half-savages who then possessed it; of whom Tacitus remarks, that, up to his own time they had been "triumphed over rather than conquered."

Another peculiar circumstance in the history of this extraordinary personage is, that when it is found convenient to represent him as defeated, though he is by no means defeated by halves, but involved in much more sudden and total ruin than the personages of real history usually meet with; yet, if it is thought fit he should be restored, it is done as quickly and completely as if Merlin's rod had been employed. He enters Russia with a prodigious army, which is totally ruined by an unprecedented hard winter; (everything relating to this man is prodigious and unprecedented;) yet in a few months we find him intrusted with another great army in Germany, which is also totally ruined at Leipsic; making, inclusive of the Egyptian, the third great army thus totally lost: yet the French are so good-natured as to furnish him with another, sufficient to make a formidable stand in France; he is, however, conquered, and presented with the sovereignty of Elba; (surely, by the bye, some more probable way might have been found of disposing of him, till again wanted, than to place him thus on the very verge of his ancient dominions;) thence he returns to France, where he is received with open arms, and enabled to lose a fifth great army at Waterloo; yet so eager were these people to be a sixth time led to destruction, that it was found necessary to confine him in an island some thousand miles off, and to quarter foreign troops upon them, lest they should make an insurrection in his favour!* Does any one believe all this, and yet refuse to believe a miracle? Or rather, what is this but a miracle? Is it not a violation of the laws of nature? for surely there are moral laws of nature as well as physical; which though more liable to exceptions in this or that particular case, are no less true as general rules than the laws of matter, and therefore cannot be violated and contradicted beyond a certain point, without a miracle.†

* Ἡ θαύματα πολλά.

Καὶ πού τι καὶ βροτῶν φρένας

ὙΠΕΡ ΤΟΝ ΑΛΗΘΗ ΔΟΓΟΝ

Δεδιδαλμένοι ψεύδεσι ποικίλοις

Εξαπατῶντι μῦθοι. PIND. Olymp. 1.

† This doctrine, though hardly needing confirmation from authority, is supported by that of Hume ; his eighth essay is, throughout, an argument for the doctrine of “Philosophical necessity,” drawn entirely from the general uniformity, observable in the course of nature with respect to the principles of human conduct, as well as those of the material universe ; from which uniformity, he observes, it is that we are enabled, in both cases, to form our judgments by means of Experience : “and if,” says he, “we would explode any forgery in history, we cannot make use of a more convincing argument, “than to prove that the actions ascribed to any person, are “directly contrary to the course of nature.
 “. The veracity of Quintus Curtius is as “suspicious when he describes the supernatural courage of “Alexander, by which he was hurried on singly to attack “multitudes, as when he describes his supernatural force and “activity, by which he was able to resist them. So readily

Nay, there is this additional circumstance which renders the contradiction of Experience more glaring in this case than in that of the miraculous histories which ingenious sceptics have held up to contempt: all the advocates of miracles admit that they are rare exceptions to the general course of nature; but contend that they must needs be so, on account of the rarity of those extraordinary occasions which are the reason of their being performed: a Miracle, they say, does not happen every day, because a Revelation is not given every

“and universally do we acknowledge a uniformity in human motives and actions as well as in the operations of body.”—Eighth Essay, p. 131, 12mo; p. 85, 8vo, 1817.

Accordingly, in the tenth essay, his use of the term “miracle,” after having called it “a transgression of a law of nature,” plainly shows that he meant to include human nature: “no testimony,” says he, “is sufficient to establish a miracle, unless the testimony be of such a nature that its falsehood would be more miraculous than the fact which it endeavours to establish.” The term “prodigy” also (which he all along employs as synonymous with “miracle”) is applied to testimony, in the same manner, immediately after: “In the foregoing reasoning we have supposed that the falsehood of that testimony would be a kind of “prodigy.” Now had he meant to confine the meaning of “miracle,” and “prodigy,” to a violation of the laws of matter, the epithet “miraculous,” applied even thus hypothetically, to false testimony, would be as unmeaning as the epithets “green” or “square;” the only possible sense in day. It would be foreign to the present purpose to seek for arguments against this answer; I leave it to those who are engaged in the controversy, to find a reply to it; but my present object is, to point out that this solution does not at all apply in the present case. Where is the peculiarity of the occasion? What sufficient reason is there for a series of events occurring in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, which never took place before? Was Europe at that period peculiarly which we can apply to it, even in imagination, the term “miraculous,” is that of “highly improbable,”—“contrary “to those laws of nature which respect human conduct:” and in this sense accordingly he uses the word in the very next sentence: “When any one tells me that he saw a dead man “restored to life, I immediately consider with myself whether “it be more probable that this person should either deceive “or be deceived, or that the fact which he relates should “really have happened. I weigh the one miracle against “the other.”—HUME’s Essay on Miracles, pp. 176, 177, 12mo; p. 182, 8vo, 1767; p. 115, 8vo, 1817.

See also a passage above quoted from the same essay, where he speaks of “the miraculous accounts of travellers;” evidently using the word in this sense.

Perhaps it was superfluous to cite authority for applying the term “miracle” to whatever is “highly improbable;” but it is important to the students of Hume, to be fully aware that he uses those two expressions as synonymous; since otherwise they would mistake the meaning of that passage which he justly calls “a general maxim worthy of our “attention.”

weak, and in a state of barbarism, that one man could achieve such conquests, and acquire such a vast empire? On the contrary, she was flourishing in the height of strength and civilization. Can the persevering attachment and blind devotedness of the French to this man, be accounted for by his being the descendant of a long line of kings, whose race was hallowed by hereditary veneration? No; we are told he was a low-born usurper, and not even a Frenchman! Is it that he was a good and kind sovereign? He is represented not only as an imperious and merciless despot, but as most wantonly careless of the lives of his soldiers. Could the French army and people have failed to hear from the wretched survivors of his supposed Russian expedition, how they had left the corpses of above 100,000 of their comrades bleaching on the snow-drifts of that dismal country, whither his mad ambition had conducted him, and where his selfish cowardice had deserted them? Wherever we turn to seek for circumstances that may help to account for the events of this incredible story, we only meet with such as aggravate its improbability.* Had it been told of some distant country, at a remote period, we could not have told what

* "Events may be so extraordinary that they can hardly be established by testimony. We would not give credit to a man who would affirm that he saw a hundred dice thrown peculiar circumstances there might have been to render probable what seems to us most strange; and yet in that case every philosophical sceptic, every free-thinking speculator, would instantly have rejected such a history, as utterly unworthy of credit. What, for instance, would the great Hume, or any of the philosophers of his school, have said, if they had found in the antique records of any nation such a passage as this? “ There “ was a certain man of Corsica, whose name was “ Napoleon, and he was one of the chief captains

“ of the host of the French; and he gathered “ together an army, and went and fought against “ Egypt: but when the king of Britain heard “ thereof, he sent ships of war and valiant men to “ fight against the French in Egypt. So they “ warred against them, and prevailed, and strength“ ened the hands of the rulers of the land against “ the French, and drove away Napoleon from “ before the city of Acre. Then Napoleon left the “ captains and the army that were in Egypt, and “ fled, and returned back to France. So the “ French people took Napoleon, and made him “ ruler over them, and he became exceeding great,

“ in the air, and that they all fell on the same faces.”—Edin. Review, Sept. 1814, p. 327.

Let it be observed, that the instance here given is miraculous in no other sense but that of being highly improbable.

“insomuch that there was none like him of all
“that had ruled over France before.”

What, I say, would Hume have thought of this, especially if he had been told that it was at this day generally credited? Would he not have confessed that he had been mistaken in supposing there was a peculiarly blind credulity and prejudice in favour of everything that is accounted sacred ;* for that, since even professed sceptics swallow implicitly such a story as this, it appears there must be a still blinder prejudice in favour of everything that is not accounted sacred?

Suppose, again, we found in this history such passages as the following: “And it came to pass
“after these things that Napoleon strengthened “himself, and gathered together another host “instead of that which he had lost, and went “and warred against the Prussians, and the “Russians, and the Austrians, and all the rulers
“of the north country, which were confederate “against him. And the ruler of Sweden, also,
“which was a Frenchman, warred against Na“poleon. So they went forth, and fought against

* “If the spirit of religion join itself to the love of wonder,
“there is an end of common sense ; and human testimony in “these circumstances loses all pretensions to authority.”— HUME’s Essay on Miracles, p. 179, 12mo; p. 185, 8vo, 1767;
p. 117, 8vo, 1817.

“the French in the plain of Leipsic. And the “French were discomfited before their enemies,
“and fled and came to the rivers which are behind “Leipsic, and essayed to pass over, that they “might escape out of the hand of their enemies;
“but they could not, for Napoleon had broken “down the bridges; so the people of the north “countries came upon them, and smote them with “a very grievous slaughter.”

“Then the ruler of Austria and all the rulers
“of the north countries sent messengers unto “Napoleon to speak peaceably unto him, saying
“Why should there be war between us any more?
“Now Napoleon had put away his wife, and taken
“the daughter of the ruler of Austria to wife.
“So all the counsellors of Napoleon came and “stood before him, and said, Behold now these “kings are merciful kings; do even as they say “unto thee; knowest thou not yet that France is “destroyed? But he spake roughly unto his “counsellors, and drave them out from his pre“sence, neither would he hearken unto their voice.
“And when all the kings saw that, they warred “against France, and smote it with the edge of “the sword, and came near to Paris, which is the “royal city, to take it: so the men of Paris went “out, and delivered up the city to them. Then

“ those kings spake kindly unto the men of Paris, “ saying, Be of good cheer, there shall no harm “ happen unto you. Then were the men of Paris “ glad, and said, Napoleon is a tyrant; he shall “ no more rule over us: also all the princes, the “ judges, the counsellors, and the captains whom “ Napoleon had raised up even from the lowest of “ the people, sent unto Lewis the brother of King
 “ Lewis, whom they had slain, and made him king
 “ over France.”

“ And when Napoleon saw that the kingdom
 “ was departed from him, he said unto the rulers
 “ which came against him, Let me, I pray you, “ give the kingdom unto my son: but they would “ not hearken unto him. Then he spake yet “ again, saying, Let me, I pray you, go and live “ in the island of Elba, which is over against “ Italy, nigh unto the coast of France; and ye “ shall give me an allowance for me and my house“ hold, and the land of Elba also for a possession.
 “ So they made him ruler of Elba.”

“ In those days the Pope returned unto his own “ land. Now the French, and divers other nations
 “ of Europe, are servants of the Pope, and hold “ him in reverence; but he is an abomination unto

“ the Britons, and to the Prussians, and to the “ Russians, and to the Swedes. Howbeit the “ French had taken away all his lands, and robbed “ him of all that he had, and carried him away “ captive into France. But when the Britons,
 “ and the Prussians, and the Russians, and the “ Swedes, and the rest of the nations that were “ confederate against France, came thither, they “ caused the French to set the Pope at liberty,
 “ and to restore all his goods that they had taken;
 “ likewise they gave him back all his possessions;
 “ and he went home in peace, and ruled over his “ own city as in times past.”

.

 “ And it came to pass when Napoleon had “ not yet been a full year at Elba, that he said “ unto his men of war that clave unto him, Go
 “ to, let us go back to France, and fight against “ King Lewis, and thrust him out from being king.
 “ So he departed, he and six hundred men with “ him that drew the sword, and warred against “ King Lewis. Then all the men of Belial gathered “ themselves together, and said, God save Napoleon.
 “ And when Lewis saw that, he fled, and gat him “ into the land of Batavia: and Napoleon ruled “ over France,” &c. &c. &c.

Now if a free-thinking philosopher—one of those who advocate the cause of unbiassed reason, and despise pretended revelations—were to meet with such a tissue of absurdities as this in an old Jewish record, would he not reject it at once as too palpable an imposture* to deserve even any inquiry into its evidence? Is that credible then of the civilized Europeans now, which could not, if reported of the semi-barbarous Jews 3000 years ago, be established by any testimony? Will it be answered, that “there is nothing supernatural in all this?” Why is it, then, that you object to what is supernatural—that you reject every account of miracles—if not because they are improbable? Surely then a story equally or still more improbable, is not to be implicitly received, merely on the ground that it is not miraculous: though in fact, as I have already (in note, p. 34,) shown from Hume’s authority, it really is miraculous. The opposition to Experience has been proved to be

* “I desire any one to lay his hand upon his heart, and “after serious consideration declare whether he thinks that “the falsehood of such a book, supported by such testimony, “would be more extraordinary and miraculous than all the “miracles it relates.”—HUME’s Essay on Miracles, p. 200, 12mo; p. 206, 8vo, 1767; p. 131, 8vo, 1817.

Let it be borne in mind, that Hume (as I have above remarked) continually employs the term “miracle” and “prodigy” to signify anything that is highly improbable and extraordinary.

as complete in this case, as in what are commonly called miracles; and the reasons assigned for that contrariety by the defenders of them, cannot be pleaded in the present instance. If then philosophers, who reject every wonderful story that is maintained by priests, are yet found ready to believe everything else, however improbable, they will surely lay themselves open to the accusation brought against them of being unduly prejudiced against whatever relates to religion.

There is one more circumstance which I cannot forbear mentioning, because it so much adds to the air of fiction which pervades every part of this marvellous tale; and that is, the nationality of it.*

Buonaparte prevailed over all the hostile States in turn, except England; in the zenith of his power, his fleets were swept from the sea, by England; his troops always defeat an equal, and frequently even a superior number of those of any other nation, except the English; and with them it is just the reverse; twice, and twice only, he is personally engaged against an English commander, and both times he is totally defeated; at Acre, and at Waterloo; and to crown all, England finally crushes this tremendous power, which had so long kept the continent in subjection or in alarm; and to the English he surrenders himself prisoner! Thoroughly national, to be sure! It may be all very true; but I would only ask, if a story had been fabricated for the express purpose of amusing the English nation, could it have been contrived more ingeniously? It would do admirably for an epic poem; and indeed bears a considerable resemblance to the Iliad and the Æneid; in which Achilles and the Greeks, Æneas and the Trojans, (the ancestors of the Romans,) are so studiously held up to admiration. Buonaparte's exploits seem magnified in order to enhance the glory of his conquerors; just as Hector is allowed to triumph during the absence of Achilles, merely to give additional splendour to his overthrow by the arm of that invincible hero. Would not this circumstance alone render a history rather suspicious in the eyes of an acute critic, even if it were not filled with such gross improbabilities; and induce him to suspend his judgment, till very satisfactory evidence (far stronger than can be found in this case) should be produced?

* "The wise lend a very academic faith to every report "which favours the passion of the reporter, whether it magnifies his country, his family, or himself."—HUME's Essay on Miracles, p. 144, 12mo; p. 200, 8vo, 1767; p. 126, 8vo, 1817.

Is it then too much to demand of the wary academic* a suspension of judgment as to the "life and adventures of Napoleon Buonaparte?" I do not pretend to decide positively that there is not, nor ever was, any such person; but merely to propose it as a doubtful point, and one the more deserving of careful investigation, from the very circumstance of its having hitherto been admitted without inquiry. Far less would I undertake to decide what is, or has been, the real state of affairs. He who points out the improbability of the current story, is not bound to suggest an hypothesis of his own;† though it may safely be affirmed, that it would be hard to invent any one more improbable than the received one. One may surely be allowed to hesitate in admitting the stories which the ancient poets tell, of earthquakes and volcanic eruptions being caused by imprisoned giants, without being called upon satisfactorily to account for those phænomena.

Amidst the defect of valid evidence under which, as I have already shown, we labour in the present

* "Nothing can be more contrary than such a philosophy" (the academic or sceptical) "to the supine indolence of the mind, its rash arrogance, its lofty pretensions, and its superstitious credulity."—Fifth Essay, p. 68, 12mo; p. 41, 8vo, 1817.

† See HUME's Essay on Miracles, pp. 189, 191, 195, 12mo; pp. 193, 197, 201, 202, 8vo, 1767; pp. 124, 125, 126, 8vo, 1817.

instance, it is hardly possible to offer more than here and there a probable conjecture; or to pronounce how much may be true, and how much fictitious, in the accounts presented to us. For it is to be observed that this case is much more open to sceptical doubts even than some miraculous histories; for some of them are of such a nature that you cannot consistently admit a part and reject the rest; but are bound, if you are satisfied as to the reality of any one miracle, to embrace the whole system; so that it is necessary for the sceptic to impeach the evidence of all of them, separately, and collectively: whereas here each single point requires to be established separately, since no one of them authenticates the rest. Supposing there be a state-prisoner at St. Helena, (which, by the way, it is acknowledged, many of the French disbelieve,) how do we know who he is, or why he is confined there? There have been state-prisoners before now, who were never guilty of subjugating half Europe, and whose offences have been very imperfectly ascertained. Admitting that there have been bloody wars going on for several years past, which is highly probable, it does not follow that the events of those wars were such as we have been told;—that Buonaparte was the author and conductor of them;—or that such a person ever existed. What disturbances may have taken place in the government of the French people, we, and even nineteen-twentieths of them, have no means of learning but from imperfect hearsay evidence; and how much credit they themselves attach to that evidence, is very doubtful. This at least is certain; that a M. Berryer, a French advocate, has published memoirs, professing to record many of the events of the recent history of France, in which, among other things, he states his conviction that Buonaparte's escape from Elba was DESIGNED AND CONTRIVED BY THE ENGLISH GOVERNMENT.* And we are assured by many travellers that this was, and is, commonly reported in France.

Now that the French should believe the whole story about Buonaparte according to this version of it, does seem utterly incredible. Let any one suppose them seriously believing that we maintained for many years a desperate struggle against this formidable emperor of theirs, in the course of which we expended such an enormous amount of blood and treasure as is reported;—that we finally, after encountering enormous risks, succeeded in subduing him, and secured him in a place of safe exile;—and that, in less than a year after, we turned him out again, like a bag-fox,—or rather, a bag-lion,—for the sake of amusing ourselves by again staking all that was dear to us on the event of a doubtful and bloody battle, in which defeat must be ruinous, and victory, if obtained at all, must cost us many thousands of our best soldiers. Let any one force himself for a moment to conceive the French seriously believing such a mass of absurdity; and the inference must be that such a people must be prepared to believe anything. They might fancy their own country to abound not only with Napoleons, but with dragons and centaurs, and "men whose heads do grow beneath their shoulders," or anything else that any lunatic ever dreamt of. If we could suppose the French capable of such monstrous credulity as the above supposition would imply, it is plain their testimony must be altogether worthless.

* See Edinburgh Review for October, 1842, p. 162.

But on the other hand, suppose them to be aware that the British Government have been all along imposing on us, and it is quite natural that they should deride our credulity, and try whether there is anything too extravagant for us to swallow. And indeed, if Buonaparte was in fact altogether a phantom conjured up by the British Ministers, then it is true that his escape from Elba really was, as well as the rest of his exploits, a contrivance of theirs.

But whatever may be believed by the French relative to the recent occurrences, in their own country, and whatever may be the real character of these occurrences, of this at least we are well assured, that there have been numerous bloody wars with France under the dominion of the Bourbons: and we are now told that France is governed by a Bourbon king, of the name of Lewis, who professes to be in the twenty-third year of his reign. Let every one conjecture for himself. I am far from pretending to decide who may have been the governor or governors of the French nation, and the leaders of their armies, for several years past. Certain it is, that when men are indulging their inclination for the marvellous, they always show a strong propensity to accumulate upon one individual (real or imaginary) the exploits of many; besides multiplying and exaggerating these exploits a thousandfold. Thus, the expounders of the ancient mythology tell us there were several persons of the name of Hercules, (either originally bearing that appellation, or having it applied to them as an honour,) whose collective feats, after being dressed up in a sufficiently marvellous garb, were attributed to a single hero. Is it not just possible, that during the rage for words of Greek derivation, the title of "Napoleon," (Ναπολέων,) which signifies "Lion of the forest," may have been conferred by the popular voice on more than one favourite general, distinguished for irresistible valour? Is it not also possible that "BUONA PARTE" may have been originally a sort of cant term applied to the "good (i.e., the bravest, or most patriotic) part" of the French army, collectively; and have been afterwards mistaken for the proper name of an individual? * I do not profess to support this conjecture; but it is certain that such mistakes may and do occur. Some critics have supposed that the Athenians imagined ANASTASIS ("Resurrection") to be a new goddess, in whose cause Paul was preaching. Would it have been thought anything incredible if we had been told that the ancient Persians, who had no idea

* It is well known with how much learning and ingenuity the Rationalists of the German school have laboured to throw discredit on the literal interpretation of the narratives, both of the Old and New Testaments; representing them as MYTHS, i. e., fables allegorically describing some physical or moral phenomena—philosophical principles—systems, &c.—under the figure of actions performed by certain ideal personages; these allegories having been, afterwards, through the mistake of the vulgar, believed as history. Thus, the real historical existence of such a person as the supposed founder of the Christian religion, and the acts attributed to him, are denied in the literal sense, and the whole of the evangelical history is explained on the "mythical" theory.

Now it is a remarkable circumstance in reference to the point at present before us, that an eminent authoress of this century has distinctly declared that Napoleon Buonaparte was NOT A MAN, but a SYSTEM.

of any but a monarchical government, had supposed Aristocratia to be a queen of Sparta? But we need not confine ourselves to hypothetical cases; it is positively stated that the Hindoos at this day believe "the honourable East India Company" to be a venerable old lady of high dignity, residing in this country. The Germans, again, of the present day derive their name from a similar mistake: the first tribe of them who invaded Gaul* assumed the honourable title of "Ger-man," which signifies "warriors;" (the words, "war" and "guerre," as well as "man," which remains in our language unaltered, are evidently derived from the Teutonic,) and the Gauls applied this as a name to the whole race.

However, I merely throw out these conjectures without by any means contending that more plausible ones might not be suggested. But whatever supposition we adopt, or whether we adopt any, the objections to the commonly received accounts will remain in their full force, and imperiously demand the attention of the candid sceptic.

* Germaniæ vocabulum recens et nuper additum ; quoniam qui primi Rhenum transgressi Gallosexpulerint, ac nunc Tungri, tunc Germani vocati sint : ita nationis nomen in nomen gentis evaluisse paullatim, ut omnes, primum a victore ob metum, mox a seipsis invento nomine, Germani vocarentur. —Tacitus, de Mor. Germ.

I call upon those, therefore, who profess themselves advocates of free inquiry—who disdain to be carried along with the stream of popular opinion, and who will listen to no testimony that runs counter to experience,—to follow up their own principles fairly and consistently. Let the same mode of argument be adopted in all cases alike; and then it can no longer be attributed to hostile prejudice, but to enlarged and philosophical views. If they have already rejected some histories, on the ground of their being strange and marvellous,—of their relating facts, unprecedented, and at variance with the established course of nature,—let them not give credit to another history which lies open to the very same objections,—the extraordinary and romantic tale we have been just considering. If they have discredited the testimony of witnesses, who are said at least to have been disinterested, and to have braved persecutions and death in support of their assertions,—can these philosophers consistently listen to and believe the testimony of those who avowedly get money by the tales they publish, and who do not even pretend that they incur any serious risk in case of being detected in a falsehood? If, in other cases, they have refused to listen to an account which has passed through many intermediate hands before it reaches them, and which is defended by those who have an interest in maintaining it; let them consider through how many, and what very suspicious hands, this story has arrived to them, without the possibility, as I have shown, of tracing it back to any decidedly authentic source, after all;—to any better authority, according to their own showing, than that of an unnamed and unknown foreign correspondent;—and likewise how strong an interest, in every way, those who have hitherto imposed on them, have, in keeping up the imposture. Let them, in short, show themselves as ready to detect the cheats and despise the fables of politicians, as of priests.

But if they are still wedded to the popular belief in this point, let them be consistent enough to admit the same evidence in other cases, which they yield to in this. If, after all that has been said, they cannot bring themselves to doubt of the existence of Napoleon Buonaparte, they must at least acknowledge that they do not apply to that question the same plan of reasoning which they have made use of in others; and they are consequently bound in reason and in honesty to renounce it altogether.

POSTSCRIPT

TO THE THIRD EDITION.

IT may seem arrogant for an obscure and nameless individual to claim the glory of having put to death the most formidable of all recorded heroes. But a shadowy champion may be overthrown by a shadowy antagonist. Many a terrific spectre has been laid by the beams of a halfpenny candle. And if I have succeeded in making out, in the foregoing pages, a probable case of suspicion, it must, I think, be admitted, that there is some ground for my present boast, of having killed Napoleon Buonaparte.

Let but the circumstances of the case be considered. This mighty Emperor, who had been so long the bugbear of the civilized world, after having obtained successes and undergone reverses, such as never befel any (other at least) real potentate, was at length sentenced to confinement in the remote island of St. Helena: a measure which many persons wondered at, and many objected to, on various grounds; not unreasonably supposing the illustrious exile to be a real person: but on the supposition of his being only a man of straw, the situation was exceedingly favourable for keeping him out of the way of impertinent curiosity, when not wanted, and for making him the foundation of any new plots that there might be occasion to conjure up.

About this juncture it was that the public attention was first invited by these pages, to the question as to the real existence of Napoleon Buonaparte. They excited, it may be fairly supposed, along with much surprise and much censure, some degree of doubt, and probably, of consequent inquiry. No fresh evidence, as far as I can learn, of the truth of the disputed points, was brought forward to dispel these doubts. We heard, however, of the most jealous precautions being used to prevent any intercourse between the formidable prisoner, and any stranger, who, from motives of curiosity, might wish to visit him. The "man in the iron mask" could hardly have been more rigorously secluded: and we also heard various contradictory reports of conversations between him and the few who were allowed access to him; the falsehood and inconsistency of most of these reports being proved in contemporary publications.

At length, just about the time when the public scepticism respecting this extraordinary personage might be supposed to have risen to an alarming height, it was announced to us that he was dead! A stop was thus put, most opportunely, to all troublesome inquiries. I do not undertake to deny that such a person did live and die. That he was, and that he did, everything that is reported, we cannot believe, unless we consent to admit contradictory statements; but many of the events recorded, however marvellous, are certainly not, when taken separately, physically impossible. But I would only entreat the candid reader to reflect what might naturally be expected, on the supposition of the surmises contained in the present work being well founded. Supposing the whole of the tale I have been considering to have been a fabrication, what would be the natural result of such an attempt to excite inquiry into its truth? Evidently the shortest and most effectual mode of eluding detection, would be to kill the phantom, and so get rid of him at once. A ready and decisive answer would thus be provided to any one in whom the foregoing arguments might have excited suspicions: "Sir, there can be no doubt that such a person existed, and performed what is related of him; and if you will just take a voyage to St. Helena, you may see with your own eyes,—not him indeed, for he is no longer living,—but his tomb: and what evidence would you have that is more decisive?"

So much for his Death: as for his Life,—it is just published by an eminent writer: besides which, the shops will supply us with abundance of busts and prints of this great man; all striking likenesses—of one another. The most incredulous must be satisfied with this! “Stat magni NOMINIS umbra!”

KONX OMPAX.

POSTSCRIPT

TO THE SEVENTH EDITION.

SINCE the publication of the Sixth Edition of this work, the French nation, and the world at large, have obtained an additional evidence, to which I hope they will attach as much weight as it deserves, of the reality of the wonderful history I have been treating of. The Great Nation, among the many indications lately given of an heroic zeal like what Homer attributes to his Argive warriors, τίσασθαι Ἑλλήνων ὀρμήματά τε στοναχάς τε, have formed and executed the design of bringing home for honourable interment the remains of their illustrious Chief.

How many persons have actually inspected these relics, I have not ascertained; but that a real coffin, containing real bones, was brought from St. Helena to France, I see no reason to disbelieve.

Whether future visitors to St. Helena will be shown merely the identical place in which Buonaparte was (said to have been) interred, or whether another set of real bones will be exhibited in that island, we have yet to learn.

This latter supposition is not very improbable. It was something of a credit to the island, an attraction to strangers, and a source of profit to some of the inhabitants, to possess so remarkable a relic ; and this glory and advantage they must naturally wish to retain. If so, there seems no reason why they should not have a Buonaparte of their own ; for there is, I believe, no doubt that there are, or were, several Museums in England, which, among other curiosities, boasted, each, of a genuine skull of Oliver Cromwell.

Perhaps, therefore, we shall hear of several well-authenticated skulls of Buonaparte also, in the collections of different virtuosos, all of whom (especially those in whose own crania the “organ of wonder” is the most largely developed) will doubtless derive equal satisfaction from the relics they respectively possess.

POSTSCRIPT

TO THE NINTH EDITION.

THE Public has been of late much interested and not a little bewildered, by the accounts of many strange events, said to have recently taken place in France and other parts of the Continent. Are these accounts of such a character as to allay, or to strengthen and increase, such doubts as have been suggested in the foregoing pages?

We are told that there is now a Napoleon Buonaparte at the head of the government of France. It is not, indeed, asserted that he is the very original Napoleon Buonaparte himself. The death of that personage, and the transportation of his genuine bones to France, had been too widely proclaimed to allow of his reappearance in his own proper person. But “uno avulso, non deficit alter.” Like the Thibetian worshippers of the Delai Lama, (who never dies; only, his soul transmigrates into a fresh body), the French are so resolved, we are told, to be under a Buonaparte—whether that be (see note to p. 51) a man or “a system”—that they have found, it seems, a kind of new incarnation of this their grand Lama, in a person said to be the nephew of the original one.

And when, on hearing that this personage now fills the high office of President of the French Republic, we inquire (very naturally) how he came there, we are informed that, several years ago, he invaded France in an English vessel, (the English—as was observed in p. 48—having always been suspected of keeping Buonaparte ready, like the winds in a Lapland witch's bag, to be let out on occasion,) at the head of a force, not, of six hundred men, like his supposed uncle in his expedition from Elba, but of fifty-five,(!) with which he landed at Boulogne, proclaimed himself emperor, and was joined by no less than one man! He was accordingly, we are told, arrested, brought to trial, and sentenced to imprisonment; but having, some years after, escaped from prison, and taken refuge in England, (England again!) he thence returned to France: AND so the French nation placed him at the head of the government!

All this will doubtless be received as a very probable tale by those who have given full credit to all the stories I have alluded to in the foregoing pages.

THE END.

NEW BOOKS AND NEW EDITIONS,

PUBLISHED BY

JOHN W. PARKER & SON, WEST STRAND.

By Richard Whately, D.D.

Archbishop of Dublin.

- The Kingdom of Christ. Fifth Edition. 8s.
- Sermons. Second Edition, with Additions. 12s.
- On Peculiarities of the Christian Religion. Sixth and Cheaper Edition. Octavo. 7s. 6d.
- On Difficulties in the Writings of the Apostle Paul. Sixth and Cheaper Edition. Octavo. 8s.
- On the Errors of Romanism having their Origin in Human Nature. Cheaper Edition. Octavo. 7s. 6d.
- On Dangers to Christian Faith from the Teaching or the Conduct of its Professors. Second Edition. 10s.
- Introductory Lectures on Political Economy. Third Edition. Octavo. 8s.
- Elements of Logic; with all the Author's Additions. Crown Octavo, 4s. 6d. Demy Octavo, 10s. 6d.
- Elements of Rhetoric; with all the Author's Additions. Crown Octavo, 4s. 6d. Demy Octavo. 10s. 6d.
- Easy Lessons on Reasoning. Fifth Edition. 1s. 6d.
- Introductory Lessons on Christian Evidences. Eleventh Edition. 6d.
- Introductory Lessons on the History of Religious Worship. Second Edition. 2s.
- Easy Lessons on Money Matters. Tenth Edit. 1s.

NEW WORKS AND NEW EDITIONS.

Lectures on the Characters of our Lord's Apostles.
3s. 6d.

Lectures on the Scripture Revelations respecting Good and Evil Angels. 3s. 6d.

View of the Scripture Revelations respecting a Future State. Sixth Edition. 5s.

English Life, Social and Domestic, in the Nineteenth Century, considered in reference to our Position as a Community of Professing Christians. Second Edition, revised. 4s. 6d.

Chance and Choice: or, the Education of Circumstances. Two Tales:—I. The Young Governess.—
II. Claudine de Soligny. Post Octavo. 7s. 6d.

Churchman's Theological Dictionary. By R. EDEN,
M.A., Chaplain to the Bishop of Norwich. Second Edition. 5s.

Cautions for the Times: addressed to the Parishioners of a Parish in England, by their former Pastor.
In Numbers, 2d. each.

The Light and the Life; or, the History of Him whose Name we bear. 1s.

Historic Certainties respecting the Early History of America, developed in a Critical Examination of the Book of the Chronicles of the Land of Ecnarf. By the Rev, ARISTARCHUS NEWLIGHT, Phil. Dr. of the University of Giessen, Corresponding Member of the Theophilanthropic and Pantisocratical Societies of Leipsig, late Professor of all Religions in several distinguished Academies at Home and Abroad, &c. &c. &c. Octavo. 2s.

English Synonyms. Edited by R. Whately, D.D.,
Archbishop of Dublin. Second Edition. 3s.

LONDON: JOHN W. PARKER & SON, WEST STRAND.

STANDARD BOOKS

PUBLISHED BY

JOHN W. PARKER & SON, LONDON.

Manual of Geographical Science.
Edited by the Rev. C. G. NICOLAY, F.R.G.S.
PART THE FIRST, Octavo, 10s. 6d., containing—

MATHEMATICAL GEOGRAPHY, by Rev. M. O'BRIEN, F.R.S., Professor of Natural Philosophy and Astronomy in King's College, London.

PHYSICAL GEOGRAPHY, by D. T. ANSTED, M.A., F.R.S., Professor of Geology in King's College, London.

CHARTOGRAPHY, by J. R. JACKSON, F.R.S., late Secretary of the Royal Geographical Society.

THEORY OF DESCRIPTION AND GEOGRAPHICAL TERMINOLOGY, by Rev. C. G. NICOLAY, F.R.G.S., Librarian of King's College, London.

Atlas of Physical and Historical Geography, to accompany the MANUAL OF GEOGRAPHICAL SCIENCE. Engraved by J. W. LOWRY, under the direction of Professor ANSTED and Rev. C. G. NICOLAY. 5s.

History of Normandy and of England. By Sir FRANCIS PALGRAVE. Vol. I. Octavo. 21s.

Principles of Political Economy. By J. STUART MILL. Second Edition. Two Volumes. Octavo. 30s.

Essays on Unsettled Questions of Political Economy. By the same. 6s. 6d.

System of Logic. By the same. Cheaper Edition. Two Volumes. 25s.

Discourse on the Studies of the University of Cambridge. By ADAM SEDGWICK, M.A., Woodwardian Professor. Fifth Edition, enlarged. (770 pages.) 12s.

On the Influence of Authority in Matters of Opinion. By G. CORNEWALL LEWIS, M.P. Octavo. 10s. 6d.

Elements of Logic. By R. WHATELY, D.D., Archbishop of Dublin. Small Octavo, 4s. 6d. Library Edition, 10s. 6d.

Elements of Rhetoric. By the same Author. Small Octavo, 4s. 6d. Library Edition, 10s. 6d.

Introductory Lectures on Political Economy. By the same Author. 8s.

History of the Inductive Sciences. By W. WHEWELL, D.D., F.R.S., Master of Trinity College, Cambridge. Second Edition, revised. Three Vols. £2 2s.

Philosophy of the Inductive Sciences. By the same Author. Second Edition. Two Volumes. Octavo. 30s.

Indications of the Creator—Theological Extracts from History and Philosophy of Inductive Sciences. By the same. 5s. 6d.

Elements of Morality. By the same. Cheaper Edition. Two Volumes. 15s.

English Synonyms. Edited by R. WHATELY, D.D., Archbishop of Dublin. Second Edition, enlarged. 3s. 6d.

On the Study of Words; Five Lectures by R. C. TRENCH, B.D., Examining Chaplain to the Bishop of Oxford. 3s. 6d.

Leaves from the Note-Book of a Naturalist. By W. J. BRODERIP. F.R.S.

History of the Royal Society, compiled from Original Authentic Documents. By C. R. WELD, Assistant-Secretary of the Royal Society. Two Volumes, Octavo. 30s.

Lectures on the Principles and Practice of Physic. By T. WATSON, M.D. Third Edition. Two Volumes. Octavo. 34s.

Cycle of Celestial Objects. By Captain W. H. SMYTH, R.N., F.R.S., Foreign Secretary of the Royal Society. Two Vols. Octavo, with Illustrations. £2 2s.

Manual of Chemistry. By W. T. BRANDE, F.R.S., Professor of Chemistry in the Royal Institution. Sixth Edition, much enlarged, and embodying all Recent Discoveries. Two large Volumes. £2 5s.

Dictionary of Materia Medica and Pharmacy. By the same Author. 15s.

Principles of Mechanism. By R. WILLIS, M.A., F.R.S., Professor of Natural Philosophy, Cambridge. 15s.

Mechanics applied to the Arts. By H. MOSELEY, M.A., F.R.S., one of Her Majesty's Inspectors of Schools. 6s. 6d.

Lectures on Astronomy. By the same Author. Third Edition. 5s. 6d.

Elements of Meteorology. By the late Professor DANIELL. With Plates. Two Volumes. Octavo. 32s.

On the Nature of Thunderstorms, and on the means of Protecting Churches and other Buildings, and Shipping, against the Effects of Lightning. By Sir W. SNOW HARRIS, F.R.S. 10s. 6d.

- Physiological Anatomy and Physiology of Man. By Dr. TODD and W. BOWMAN, F.R.S. Part III., 7s. Vol I., 15s.
- Connexion of Natural and Divine Truth. By BADEN POWELL, M.A., F.R.S., Professor of Geometry, Oxford. 9s.
- Undulatory Theory as applied to the Dispersion of Light. By the same Author. Octavo. With coloured Chart. 9s.
- Mathematical Tracts. By G. BIDDLE AIRY, M.A., F.R.S., Astronomer Royal. Third Edition. Octavo. 15s.
- The Philosophy of Living. By HERBERT MAYO, M.D. Cheaper Edition, with Additions. 5s.
- Management of the Organs of Digestion in Health and in Disease. By the same Author. Second Edition. 6s. 6d.
- Lunacy and Lunatic Life, with Hints on the Personal Care and Management of those afflicted with Derangement. 3s. 6d.
- German Mineral Waters: and their rational employment for the Cure of certain Chronic Diseases. By S. SUTRO, M.D., Physician of the German Hospital. 7s. 6d.
- Spasm, Languor, and Palsy. By J. A. WILSON, M.D., Physician to St. George's Hospital. 7s.
- Gout, Chronic Rheumatism, and Inflammation of the Joints. By R. B. TODD, M.D., F.R.S., Physician of King's College Hospital. 7s. 6d.
- Minerals and their Uses. By J. R. JACKSON, F.R.S. With Frontispiece. 7s. 6d.
- Lectures on Dental Physiology and Surgery. By J. TOMES, F.R.S., Surgeon-Dentist to the Middlesex Hospital. Octavo. With 100 Illustrations. 12s.
- Instructions in the Use and Management of Artificial Teeth. By the same Author. With Illustrations. 3s. 6d.
- Practical Geology and Mineralogy, By JOSHUA TRIMMER, F.G.S. Octavo, with Two Hundred Illustrations. 12s.
- Practical Chemistry for Farmers and Landowners. By the same Author. 5s.
- Practical Geodesy. By BUTLER WILLIAMS, C.E. New Edition, with Chapters on Estate, Parochial, and Railroad Surveying. With Illustrations. 12s. 6d.
- Manual for Teaching Model-Drawing; with a Popular View of Perspective. By the same Author. (Under the Sanction of the Committee of Council on Education.) Octavo, with shaded Engravings. 15s.
- Instructions in Drawing. Abridged from the above. 3s.
- Chemistry of the Crystal Palace: a Popular Account of the Chemical Properties of the Chief Materials employed in its Construction. By T. GRIFFITHS. 5s.
- Chemistry of the four Ancient Elements. By the same. Second Edition. 4s. 6d.
- Recreations in Chemistry. By the same. Second Edition, enlarged. 5s.
- Recreations in Physical Geography. By Miss R. M. ZORNLIN. Fourth Edition. 6s.
- World of Waters; or, Recreations in Hydrology. By the same Author. Second Edition. 6s.
- Recreations in Geology. By the same Author. Second Edition. 4s. 6d.
- Recreations in Astronomy. By Rev. L. TOMLINSON, M.A. Third Edition. 4s. 6d.
- Young Italy. By A. BAILLIE COCHRANE, M.P. Post 8vo. 10s. 6d.
- Wales: The Social, Moral, and Religious Condition of the People, considered especially with reference to Education. By Sir THOMAS PHILLIPS. Octavo. 14s.
- Summer Time in the Country. By Rev. R. A. WILLMOTT. Second Edition. 5s.
- Correspondence of Sir Isaac Newton and Professor Cotes, and other unpublished Letters and Papers of Newton. Edited, with Synoptical View of Newton's Life, by J. EDLESTON, M.A., Fel. Trin. Col. Cambridge. With Portrait. Octavo. 10s.
- Shipwrecks of the Royal Navy. Compiled from Official Documents. By W. O. S. GILLY. With a Preface by Dr. GILLY, Canon of Durham. Second Edition. 7s. 6d.
- Harmony of Scripture and Geology; or, the Earth's Antiquity in Harmony with the Mosaic Record of Creation. By J. GRAY, M.A., Rector of Dibden. Second Edition. 5s.
- Danger of Superficial Knowledge: A Lecture. By J. D. FORBES, F.R.S., Professor of Natural Philosophy, Edinburgh. 2s.
- Introductory Lectures delivered at Queen's College, London. 5s.
- The Saint's Tragedy. By C. KINGSLEY, Rector of Eversley. Cheaper Edition. 2s.
- Violenzia; a Tragedy. 3s. 6d.
- Justin Martyr, and other Poems. By R. CHENEVIX TRENCH. Third Edition. 6s.
- Poems from Eastern Sources,—Genoveva, and other Poems. By the same Author. Second Edition. 5s. 6d.
- Schiller's Complete Poems, attempted in English. By EDGAR ALFRED BOWRING. 6s.
- Poems. By GEORGE MEREDITH. 5s.

Yeast: a Problem. By C. KINGSLEY, Rector of Eversley. Reprinted, with Additions, from Fraser's Magazine. Cheaper Edition. 5s.

College Life in the Time of James the First, as illustrated by an Unpublished Diary of Sir Symonds d'Ewes, Bart. 5s.

English Life, Social and Domestic, in the Middle of the Nineteenth Century, Second Edition. 4s. 6d.

The Professor's Wife: a Tale from the German of Auerbach. 2s. 6d.

Chance and Choice: or, the Education of Circumstances. Two Tales. 7s. 6d.

Ansehar: a Story of the North. By RICHARD JOHN KING. 7s.

Brampton Rectory: or, the Lesson of Life. Second Edition. 8s. 6d.

Compton Merivale: another Leaf from the Lesson of Life. By the Author of Brampton Rectory. 8s. 6d.

John Sterling's Essays and Tales. Edited, with Life, by Archdeacon HARE. Two volumes, with Portrait. 21s.

The City of God; a Vision of the Past, the Present, and the Future. By E. BUDGE, Rector of Bratton. 8s. 6d.

Chronicles of the Seasons; a Course of Daily Instruction and Amusement, selected from the Natural History, Science, Art, Antiquities, and Biography of our Fatherland. In Four Books, 3s. 6d. each.

The Merchant and the Friar; or, Truths and Fictions of the Middle Ages. By Sir F. PALGRAVE. Second Edition. 3s.

Tales and Stories from History. By AGNES STRICKLAND. Cheaper Edition. One Volume. 5s.

Woman's Mission. Thirteenth Edition. 2s.

Little Bracken Burners. A Tale. By LADY CALLCOTT. Third Edition. 1s. 6d.

Ethel Lea: a Story. By ANNA KING, Author of "Hours of Childhood." 2s. 6d.

Light in Darkness; or, the Records of a Village Rectory. Cheaper Edition. 2s. 6d.

Sister Mary's Tales on Natural History. Cheaper Edition. 1s. 6d.

Natural Philosophy for Beginners. Third Edition, with 143 Woodcuts. 2s.

Popular Poems, selected by ELIZABETH PARKER. Cheaper Edition. 2s. 6d.

Easy Poetry for Children. Cheaper Edition. 1s.

Introduction to English Composition. By Rev. J. EDWARDS. Fifth Edition. 2s.

Bible Biography. By E. FARR. Second Edition. 4s.

Abbott's Reader: Familiar Pieces in Prose and Verse. Fifth Edition. 3s.

History of the Christian Church. By the late Professor BURTON. Cheaper Edition. 5s.

History of the Church of England. By T. VOWLER SHORT, D.D., Bishop of St. Asaph. Fifth Edition. Octavo. 16s.

Burnet's History of the Reformation, abridged. Edited, with Additions, by Professor CORRIE, Master of Jesus College, Cambridge. 10s. 6d.

History of the English Reformation. By F. C. MASSINGBERD, M.A., Rector of South Ormsby. Second Edition. 6s.

History of Popery; the Origin, Growth, and Progress of the Papal Power; its Political Influence, and Effects on the Progress of Civilization. 9s. 6d.

Anglo-Saxon Church, its History, Revenues, and General Character. By H. SOAMES, M.A. Third Edition. 10s. 6d.

Elizabethan Religious History. By the same Author. Octavo. 16s.

Ullmann's Gregory of Nazianzum. A Contribution to the Ecclesiastical History of the Fourth Century. Translated by G. V. Cox, M.A. 6s.

Neander's Julian the Apostate and his Generation: an Historical Picture. Translated by G. V. Cox, M.A. 3s. 6d.

Dahlmann's Life of Herodotus, drawn out from his Book. With Notes. Translated by G. V. Cox, M.A. 5s.

Student's Manual of Ancient History. By W. COOKE TAYLOR, LL.D. Fifth Edition. 10s. 6d.

Student's Manual of Modern History. By the same Author. Fifth Edition, with New Supplementary Chapter. 10s. 6d.

History of Mohammedanism. Cheaper Edition. By the same Author. 4s.

History of Christianity. By the same Author. 6s. 6d.

Crusaders; Scenes, Events, and Characters from the Times of the Crusades. By T. KEIGHTLEY. 7s.

The Lord and the Vassal; a Familiar Exposition of the Feudal System. 2s.

French Revolution; its Causes and Consequences. By F. M. ROWAN. 3s. 6d.

Labaume's History of Napoleon's Invasion of Russia. 2s. 6d.

Historical Sketch of the British Army. By G. R. GLEIG, M.A., Chaplain General to the Forces. 3s. 6d.

Family History of England. By the same Author. With numerous Illustrations. Three Volumes. 6s. 6d. each.

School History of England, abridged from Gleig's Family History of England; with copious Chronology, List of Contemporary Sovereigns, and Questions. 6s.

Familiar History of Birds. By E. STANLEY, D.D., Bishop of Norwich. Fifth Edition, with numerous Illustrations. 5s.

Domesticated Animals. By MARY ROBERTS. 3s. 6d.

Wild Animals. By the same. 3s. 6d.

Amusements in Chess. By C. TOMLINSON. 4s. 6d.

Musical History, Biography, and Criticism. By GEORGE HOGARTH. Two Volumes. 10s. 6d.

Memoir of Bishop Copleston, with Selections from his Diary and Correspondence. By W. J. COPLESTON, M.A., Rector of Cromhall. 10s. 6d.

Life of Archbishop Usher. By C. R. ELINGTON, D.D., Regius Professor of Divinity, Dublin. Portrait. Octavo. 12s.

Life of Archbishop Sancroft. By the late Dr. D'OXYLY. Octavo. 9s.

Memoirs of the Life, Character, and Writings, of Bishop Butler. By T. BARTLETT, M.A., Rector of Kingstone. 12s.

Lives of Eminent Christians. By R. B. HONE, M.A., Archdeacon of Worcester. Four Volumes. 4s. 6d. each.

Bishop Jeremy Taylor; his Predecessors, Contemporaries, and Successors. By Rev. R. A. WILLMOTT. Second Edition. 5s.

Lives of English Sacred Poets. By the same Author. Two Vols. 4s. 6d. each.

Life and Services of Lord Harris. By the Right Hon. S. R. LUSHINGTON. Second Edition. 6s. 6d.

Notes on the Parables. By R. C. TRENCH, B.D. Examining Chaplain to the Bishop of Oxford. Fourth Edition. Octavo. 12s.

Notes on the Miracles. By the same Author. Third Edition. 12s.

St. Augustine's Exposition of the Sermon on the Mount. With an Essay on St. Augustine as an Interpreter of Scripture. By R. C. TRENCH, B.D. Second Edition. 7s. The Essay separately, 3s. 6d.

Literature of the Church of England; Specimens of the Writings of Eminent Divines, with Memoirs of their Lives and Times. By R. CATTEMOLE, B.D. Two volumes. Octavo. 25s.

Essays on Peculiarities of the Christian Religion. By R. WHATELY, D.D., Archbishop of Dublin. Cheaper Edition. 7s. 6d.

Essays on Difficulties in the Writings of the Apostle Paul. By the same Author. Cheaper Edition. 8s.

Essays on Errors of Romanism. By the same. Cheaper Edition. 7s. 6d.

Essays on Dangers to Christian Faith from the Teaching or the Conduct of its Professors. By the same Author. 10s.

Mission of the Comforter. By J. C. HARE, M.A., Archdeacon of Lewes. Second Edition. Octavo. 12s.

The Victory of Faith. By the same Author. Second Edition. 6s.

Parish Sermons. By the same Author. Two Series. Octavo. 12s. each.

The Old Testament. Nineteen Sermons on the First Lessons for the Sundays between Septuagesima Sunday and the First Sunday after Trinity. By F. D. MAURICE, M.A., Chaplain of Lincoln's Inn. 6s.

The Church a Family: Sermons on the Occasional Services of the Prayer-Book. By the same Author. 4s. 6d.

The Prayer Book; specially considered as a Protection against Romanism. By the same Author. 5s. 6d.

The Lord's Prayer. Nine Sermons. By the same Author. Third Edition. 2s. 6d.

The Religions of the World, and their Relations to Christianity. By the same Author. Cheaper Edition. 5s.

Lectures on the Epistle to the Hebrews. By the same. 7s. 6d.

Christmas Day, and other Sermons. By the same Author. Octavo. 10s. 6d.

Lectures on the Characters of our Lord's Apostles. By a Country Pastor. 3s. 6d.

Lectures on the Scripture Revelations respecting Good and Evil Angels. By the same Author. 3s. 6d.

View of the Scripture Revelations respecting a Future State. Sixth Edition. By the same Author. 5s.

Twenty-five Village Sermons. By C. KINGSLEY, jun., Rector of Eversley. 5s.

Churchman's Theological Dictionary. By R. EDEN, M.A., Chaplain to the Bishop of Norwich. Second Edition. 5s.

The Gospel-Narrative according to the Authorized Text, without Repetition or Omission. With a Continuous Exposition, Marginal Proofs in full, and Notes. By J. FORSTER, M.A., Her Majesty's Chaplain of the Savoy. Fourth Edition, 12s.

Statutes relating to the Ecclesiastical and Eleemosynary Institutions of England, Wales, Ireland, India, and the Colonies; with Decisions. By A. J. STEPHENS, M.A., F.R.S. Two large Volumes, with copious Indices, £3 3s.

Exposition of the Thirty-Nine Articles, Historical and Doctrinal. By E. H. BROWNE, M.A., Prebendary of Exeter; The First Volume. Octavo. 10s. 6d.

The Churchman's Guide; an Index of Sermons and other Works, arranged according to their subjects. By JOHN FORSTER, M.A. Octavo. 7s.

Manual of Christian Antiquities. By J. E. RIDDLE, M.A., Bampton Lecturer, Oxford. Second Edition. 18s.

Luther and his Times. By the same Author. 5s.

Churchman's Guide to the Use of the English Liturgy. By the same Author. 3s. 6d.

First Sundays at Church. By the same Author. Fifth Edition. 3s. 6d.

The Early Christians. By the Rev. W. PRIDDEN, M.A. Fourth Edition. 4s.

The Book of the Fathers, and the Spirit of their Writings. 9s. 6d.

Babylon and Jerusalem: a Letter addressed to Ida, Countess of Hahn-Hahn. From the German, with a Preface by the Translator. 2s. 6d.

Edited for the Syndics of the Cambridge University Press.

Works of Dr. Isaac Barrow. New Edition, compared with original MSS., and enlarged with materials hitherto unpublished.

Sanderson De Obligatione Conscientiæ - Prælectiones Decem Oxoniæ in Schola Theologica Habitiæ. With English Notes, including an abridged Translation by W. WHEWELL, D.D., Master of Trinity College. Octavo. 9s.

The Homilies, with various Readings, and the Quotations from the Fathers given at length in the Original Languages. Edited by G. E. CORRIE, B.D., Master of Jesus College, and Norrisian Professor of Divinity. Octavo. 10s. 6d.

Pearson on the Creed. Revised and Corrected by TEMPLE CHEVALLIER, B.D., Professor of Mathematics, Durham. 12s.

*. In this edition the folio of 1669 has been taken as the principal model of the text, and the quotations from the Fathers have been verified throughout. The passages from the Rabbinical writings and Chaldee paraphrases have been carefully collated.

Twysden's Historical Vindication of the Church of England in point of Schism. Edited, with the Author's MS. Corrections, by Professor CORRIE. 7s. 6d.

Archbishop Usher's Answer to a Jesuit; with other Tracts on Popery. Octavo. 13s. 6d.

Dr. Hey's Lectures on Divinity. Third Edition. Two Vols. Octavo. 30s.

Wilson's Illustration of the Method of Explaining the New Testament. Edited by T. TURTON, D.D., Bishop of Ely. 8s.

Church of St. Patrick; an Inquiry into the Independence of the Ancient Church of Ireland. By W. G. TODD, A.B. 4s.

Civil History of the Jews. By O. COCKAYNE, M.A., King's College. Second Edition. 4s. 6d.

Cudworth on Freewill; now first Edited, with Notes, by J. ALLEN, M.A., Archdeacon of Salop. 3s.

Manual of the Antiquities of the Christian Church. By Professor GUERICKE, of Halle. Translated and Adapted to the Use of the English Church, by A. J. W. MORRISON, B.A., Master of Grammar School, Truro. 5s. 6d.

Garrick's Mode of Reading the Liturgy. With Notes, and a Discourse on Public Reading. By R. CULL. 5s. 6d.

Ordo Sæclorum; a Treatise on the Chronology of the Holy Scriptures. By H. Browne, M.A., Canon of Chichester. 20s.

Observations on Dr. Wiseman's Reply to Dr. Turton's Roman Catholic Doctrine of the Eucharist Considered. By T. TURTON, D.D., Bishop of Ely. 4s. 6d.

James's Treatise on the Corruptions of Scripture, Councils, and Fathers, by the Prelates, Pastors, and Pillars of the Church of Rome. Revised by J. E. COX, M.A., Vicar of St. Helen's, Bishopsgate. 12s.

Fullwood's Roma Ruit. The Pillars of Rome Broken. New Edition, by C. HARDWICK, M.A., Fellow of St. Catharine's Hall, Cambridge. Octavo. 10s. 6d.

The Scriptural Character of the English Church considered. With Notes. By DERWENT COLERIDGE, M.A., Principal of St. Mark's College. Octavo. 12s. 6d.

College Lectures on Ecclesiastical History. By W. BATES, B.D., Fellow of Christ's College, Cambridge. Second Edition. 6s. 6d.

College Lectures on Christian Antiquities, and the Ritual. By the same Author. 9s.

Hints for an Improved Translation of the New Testament. By J. SCHOLEFIELD, M.A., Professor of Greek, Cambridge. Third Edition. 3s. 6d.

Choral Service of the Church: an Inquiry into the Liturgical System of the Cathedral and Collegiate Foundations of the Anglican Communion. By J. JEBB, M.A., Rector of Peterstow. 16s.

Rituale Anglo-Catholicum; or, the Testimony of the Catholic Church to the Book of Common Prayer. By H. BAILEY, B.D., Warden of St. Augustine's College, Canterbury. Octavo. 15s.

The Personality of the Tempter, and other Sermons, Doctrinal and Occasional. By C. J. VAUGHAN, D.D., Head Master of Harrow School, Chaplain in Ordinary to the Queen. Octavo. 7s. 6d.

Commentary on the Epistle of Paul the Apostle to the Romans; with a New Translation and Notes. By W. WITHERS EWBANK, M.A., Incumbent of St. George's, Everton. Two Vols. 5s. 6d. each.

Sermons preached before the University of Oxford. By C. A. OGILVIE, D.D. Canon of Christ Church. Octavo. 5s.

Lectures on the Prophecies, proving the Divine Origin of Christianity. By A. M'CAUL, D.D., Professor of Divinity in King's College, London. Octavo. 7s.

Two Series of Discourses. I. On Christian Humiliation. II. On the City of God. By C. H. TERROT, D.D., Bishop of Edinburgh. Octavo. 7s. 6d.

College Chapel Sermons. By W. WHEWELL, D.D., Master of Trinity College, Cambridge. 10s. 6d.

The Liturgy as it is, illustrated in a Series of Practical Sermons. By H. HOWARTH, B.D., Rector of St. George, Hanover Square. Second Edition. 4s. 6d.

Sermons. By J. O. W. HAWEIS, M.A., Morning Preacher at the Magdalen Hospital. 5s. 6d.

Practical Sermons, by Dignitaries and other Clergymen. Edited by J. C. CROTHWAITE, M.A., Rector of St. Mary-at-Hill. Three Volumes. Octavo. 7s. each.

Short Sermons for Children, illustrative of the Catechism and Liturgy. By the Rev. C. A. JOHNS, B.A. 3s. 6d.

The Calling of a Medical Student; Four Sermons preached at King's College, London. By E. H. PLUMPTRE, M.A., Chaplain and Divinity Lecturer. 1s. 6d.

Butler's Three Sermons on Human Nature, and Dissertation on Virtue. With Preface and Syllabus, by W. WHEWELL, D.D. Second Edition. 3s. 6d.

Butler's Six Sermons on Moral Subjects. With Preface and Syllabus, by Dr. WHEWELL. 3s. 6d.

Village Lectures on the Liturgy. By W. PALIN, Rector of Stifford. 3s. 6d.

The Holy City; Historical, Topographical, and Antiquarian Notices of Jerusalem. By G. WILLIAMS, B.D., Fellow of King's College, Cambridge. Second Edition, with numerous Illustrations and Additions, and a plan of Jerusalem. Two large Volumes. £2 5s.

 The Plan is published separately, with a Memoir, 9s.; or Mounted on Rollers, 18s.

History of the Holy Sepulchre. By Professor WILLIS. Reprinted from Williams's Holy City. With Illustrations. 9s.

Notes on German Churches. By W. WHEWELL, D.D., Master of Trinity College, Cambridge. Third Edition. 12s.

The Six Colonies of New Zealand. By W. FOX. 3s. With large Map by Arrowsmith, 4s. 6d.

Handbook for New Zealand. Recent Information, compiled for the Use of Intending Colonists. 6s.

View of the Art of Colonization. By E. GIBBON WAKEFIELD. Octavo. 12s.

Travels in the Track of the Ten Thousand Greeks; a Geographical and Descriptive Account of the Expedition of Cyrus. By W. F. AINSWORTH. 7s. 6d.

Travels and Researches in Asia Minor, Mesopotamia, Chaldea, and Armenia. By the same Author. Two Vols., with Illustrations. 24s.

Gazpacho; or, Summer Months in Spain. By W. G. Clark, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. Cheaper Edition. 5s.

Auvergne, Piedmont, and Savoy: a Summer Ramble. By C. R. WELD. 8s. 6d.

Wanderings in the Republics of Western America. By GEORGE BYAM. With Illustrations. 7s. 6d.

Wild Life in the Interior of Central America. By the same Author. 5s.

Hesperos; or, Travels in the West. Two Volumes. By Mrs. HOUSTOUN. 14s.

Commentary on the Cuneiform Inscriptions of Babylonia and Assyria. By Lieut.-Colonel RAWLINSON. Octavo. 3s.

Port Phillip in 1849. By Dr. CLUTTERBUCK, Nine Years Resident in the Colony. With a Map. 3s.

Charters of the Old English Colonies in America. With Introduction and Notes. By S. LUCAS, M.A. 4s. 6d.

Canterbury Papers. Nos. I. to VIII. 6d. each; in a wrapper, 4s. Nos. IX. and X., 1s. No. XI., with Four Views of the Canterbury Settlement, 1s. 6d.

Hints on Church Colonization. By J. C. WYNTER, M.A., Rector of Gatton. 6d.

Captain Cook's Voyages; with Accounts of Pitcairn's Island, and the Mutiny of the Bounty. Fourth Edition. 2s. 6d.

Christopher Columbus; his Life, Voyages, and Discovery of the New World. Third Edition. 2s. 6d.

Mungo Park; his Life and Travels, with an Account of his Death, and of later Discoveries. Third Edition. 2s. 6d.

Humboldt's Travels and Discoveries in America. Second Edition. 2s. 6d.

GERMAN WORKS FOR LEARNERS,

By PROFESSOR BERNAYS, of King's College.

German Grammar. 5s.

German Exercises. 5s. 6d.

German Examples. 3s.

German Reader. 5s.

German Historical Anthology. 5s.

German Poetical Anthology. 7s.

GERMAN CLASSICS,

With English Notes, by PROFESSOR BERNAYS.

Schiller's Maid of Orleans. 2s.

Schiller's William Tell. 2s.

CLASSICAL TEXTS,

Carefully Revised by C. BADHAM, M.A., of Louth; PROFESSOR BROWNE, of King's College; W. HAIG BROWN, M.A.; DR. DONALDSON, of Bury; DR. MAJOR, of King's College; PROFESSOR PILLANS, of Edinburgh, &c. &c.

CICERO de SENECTUTE. 1s.

CICERO de AMICITIA. 1s.

CICERO de OFFICIIS. 2s.

CICERO pro PLANCIO. 1s.

CICERO pro MILONE. 1s.

CICERO pro MURÆNA. 1s.

CICERONIS ORATIO PHILIPPICA SECUNDA. 1s.

TACITI GERMANIA. 1s.

TACITI AGRICOLA. 1s.

EXCERPTA ex TACITI ANNALIBUS. 2s. 6d.

CÆSAR de BELLO GALlico. I. to IV. 1s. 6d.

VIRGILII GEORGICA. 1s. 6d.

OVIDII FASTI. 2s.

HORATII SATIRÆ. 1s.

HORATII CARMINA. 1s. 6d.

HORATII ARS POETICA. 6d.

TERENTII ANDRIA. 1s.

PLATONIS PHÆDO. 2s.

PLATONIS MENEXENUS. 1s.

PLATONIS PHÆDRUS. 1s. 6d.

EXCERPTA ex ARRIANO. 2s. 6d.

SOPHOCLES PHILOCTETES, with Notes. 2s.

SOPHOCLES ŒDIPUS TYRANNUS, with Notes. 2s. 6d.

EURIPIDIS BACCHÆ. 1s.

ÆSCHYLI EUMENIDES. 1s.

PLUTARCH'S LIVES of SOLON, PERICLES, and PHILOPOMEN. 2s.

Outlines of History of England. 1s.

Outlines of History of Ireland. 1s.

Outlines of History of France. 1s. 3d.

Outlines of Roman History. 10d.

Outlines of Grecian History. 1s.

Outlines of Sacred History. 2s. 6d.

Outlines of History of British Church. 1s. 6d.

Outlines of Geography. 10d.

Outlines of Physical Geography. 10d.

Outlines of Astronomy. 10d.

Arundines Cami, sive Musarum Cantabrigiensium Lusum Canori, collegit atque edidit HENRICUS DBURY, M.A. Fourth Edition. 12s.

The New Cratylus; Contributions towards a more Accurate Knowledge of the Greek Language. By J. W. DONALDSON, D.D., Head Master of King Edward the Sixth's School, Bury St. Edmund's. Second Edition, Octavo, much enlarged. 18s.

Agamemnon of Æschylus, the Text, with a Translation into English Verse, and Notes. By J. CONINGTON, M.A., Fellow of University College, Oxford. 7s. 6d.

Æschylus translated into English Verse. With Notes, Life of Æschylus, and a Discourse on Greek Tragedy. By Professor BLACKIE, of Aberdeen. Two Volumes. 16s.

Phædrus, Lysis, and Protagoras of Plato. Translated by J. WRIGHT, M.A., Master of Sutton Coldfield School. 4s. 6d.

Homeric Ballads: the Text, with Metrical Translations and Notes. By the late Dr. MAGINN. 6s.

Tacitus, the Complete Works, with a Commentary, Life of Tacitus, Indices, and Notes. Edited by Professor RITTER, of Bonn. Four Volumes. Octavo. 28s.

Aristophanis Comœdiæ Vndecim, cum Notis et Indice Historico, edidit HYBERTVS A. HOLDEN, A.M. Coll. Trin. Cant. Socius. Octavo. 15s.

Aulularia and Menæchmei of Plautus, with Notes by J. HILDYARD, B.D., Fellow of Christ's Coll., Camb. 7s. 6d. each.

Antigone of Sophocles, in Greek and English, with Notes. By J. W. DONALDSON, D.D., Head Master of Bury School. 9s.

Pindar's Epinician Odes, revised and explained; with copious Notes and Indices. By Dr. DONALDSON. 16s.

Becker's Gallus; or, Roman Scenes of the Time of Augustus, with Notes and Excursus. Translated by F. METCALFE, M.A. Second Edition. 12s.

Becker's Charicles; or, Illustrations of the Private Life of the Ancient Greeks. Translated by F. METCALFE, M.A. 12s.

Speeches of Demosthenes against Aphobus and Onetor, Translated, with Explanatory Notes, by C. RANN KENNEDY, M.A., Fellow of Trin. Coll., Camb. 9s.

Selection from Greek Verses of Shrewsbury School. By B. H. KENNEDY, D.D., Head Master of Shrewsbury School. 8s.

Select Private Orations of Demosthenes: with Notes. By C. T. PENROSE, M.A., Master of Sherborne School. 5s.

Frogs of Aristophanes; with English Notes. By the Rev. H. P. COOKESLEY. 7s.

Classical Examination Papers of King's College. By R. W. BROWNE, M.A., Professor of Classical Literature. 6s.

Fables of Babrius. Edited by G. C. LEWIS, M.A. 5s. 6d.

Cambridge Greek and English Testament. Edited by Professor SCHOLEFIELD. Third Edition. 7s. 6d.

Cambridge Greek Testament. 3s. 6d.

Sacred Latin Poetry; with Notes and Introduction. By R. C. TRENCH, B.D. 7s.; or 14s. bound in antique calf.

Commentary on the Acts of the Apostles. By W. G. HUMPHRY, B.D., Examining Chaplain to the Bishop of London. Octavo. 7s.

Pearson's Lectures on the Acts of the Apostles and Annals of St. Paul. Edited in English, with a few Notes, by J. R. CROWFOOT, B.D., Divinity Lecturer of King's College, Cambridge. 4s.

Greek Text of the Acts of the Apostles; with English Notes. By H. ROBINSON, D.D. 8s.

Beckh's Public Economy of Athens. Translated by G. C. LEWIS, A.M., M.P. 8vo. 18s.

Schleiermacher's Introductions to the Dialogues of Plato. Translated by W. DOBSON, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. 12s. 6d.

New Hebrew Lexicon. Hebrew and English, arranged according to the permanent letters in each word. English and Hebrew. With Hebrew Grammar, Vocabulary, and Analysis of Book of Genesis. Also, Chaldee Grammar, Lexicon, and Analysis of Old Testament. By T. JARRETT, M.A., Professor of Arabic, Cambridge. 21s.

Guide to the Hebrew Student. By H. F. BERNARD, Teacher of Hebrew, Cambridge. 10s. 6d.

The Psalms in Hebrew, with Critical, Exegetical, and Philological Commentary. By G. PHILLIPS, B.D., Fellow and Tutor of Queen's College, Cambridge. Two Volumes. 32s.

Elements of Syriac Grammar. By G. PHILLIPS, B.D. Second Edition. 10s.

Practical Arabic Grammar. By DUNCAN STEWART. Octavo. 16s.

Analysis of the Text of the History of Joseph. By A. OLLIVANT, D.D., Lord Bishop of Llandaff. 6s.

University of British Columbia Library

DUE DATE

	NOV 19 1970
NOV 19 1970	JAN - 3 1990
NOV 19 REC'D	JAN 18 1991 RET'D
MAR 18 1971
MAR 12 REC'D
DEC 1 1986
DEC 09 1986 REC'D
MAR 10 1989 RET'D
P. C. SENT
1990 DEC 7

FORM 310

History of Christianity, from its Promulgation to its Legal Establishment in the Roman Empire. By W. C. TAYLOR, LL.D., Trinity College, Dublin. 6s. 6d.

The Churchman's Theological Dictionary. By ROBERT ELLEN, M.A., late Fellow of Corpus Christi College, Oxford. Second Edition. 5s.

 The design of this work is to give plain and simple explanations of the Theological and Ecclesiastical terms which are used in describing and discussing religious Ordinances, Doctrines, and Institutions, without entering into the controversies which have arisen respecting their object and import.

London: JOHN W. PARKER AND SON, West Strand.

UNIVERSITY OF B C LIBRARY

3 9424 02200 6958

